Congratulating a master’s degree recipient is President Don A. Orton.

For the Class of 1976, a new beginning.

Cambridge Mayor Alfred Vellucci presents a special welcome to Lord Mayor Birdsall.

Approximately 1000 graduates, their families and friends fill Burden Hall in Allston, Mass., for the May 28 ceremonies.

Associate Professor of Music Elmer F. Benjamin listens as Professor of English David D. Honick reads the citation honoring the retiring Benjamin.
Lesley Art in Israel

A painting by Kim Mandly '78 of Manchester, Connecticut, is hanging in the American Embassy in Tel Aviv, Israel. Kim, an elementary education major with a minor in art, painted the piece entitled "Our Shalom" after she returned from a January Program dance-study tour of Israel. Kitty Dukakis '63 accompanied the group of four dancers.

In her painting, she portrays an "American dancer sitting with a wise Israeli woman with the common bond of love held in their hands. The trees are spotted with colors of yellow and gold as they are in Israel," she says. "The reflections in the foreground represent myself looking in retrospect upon the colorful spirit I felt during my visit. The spots of white light above the women's heads symbolize the sun and light of hope which always seem to be shining in Israel," she continues.

Mailing arrangements for the painting were handled through the office of Senator Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.).

Woman '76 Appearance

Lesley College student Jeanne Ama-ral '78 of New Bedford, Mass., appeared on WBZ-TV Channel 4's Woman '76 Show May 12. Jeanne performed one of her original songs and talked about the Lesley Women's Festival with show hostess Sharon King.

Theatre Company Tours

Nine graduate students and faculty member Iris Fanger from the Institute for the Arts and Human Development formed the theatre company Playmakers II this spring. The group toured throughout Massachusetts during April and May with an improvised participatory show.

The show was designed for special needs children integrated into an audience of their peers. The first show specifically designed for such an audience, it incorporated mime, music, dance and drama.

Ms. Fanger, who originated and directed the company, says, "our goals for children were recognition, learning through participation and the joy of being entertained." Such concepts as self-image, body parts, space arrangement and the use of imagination were explored.

Participating in the show were graduate students: Susan Bumagin, Priscilla Harmel, Karolina Illigen, Ilene Kell, Rachel Meshoulam, Amy Orser, Cathy Stillman, Sandra Simpson and Susan Yates.

Outreach Conference Held

The Graduate School's Counselor Education Program sponsored an outreach conference on "Person to Person to Community" May 1-2 on campus. Professionals, para-professionals and interested persons came together to explore, share and evaluate ideas and issues surrounding services which "reach out" to persons and groups in the community.

Save the Dates!

Mark November 18 and 19 on your calendar for the 1976 New England Kindergarten Conference, sponsored by the Lesley College Graduate School of Education. This year's Conference will be held at the Chateau de Ville and Lantana's complex in Randolph, Massachusetts. For more information about the Conference, contact Professor of Education Mary Mindess at 868-9600, extension 161.

C.A.G.S. Approved

The Board of Higher Education of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts has granted approval for the Graduate School of Education to implement a Certificate of Advanced Graduate Studies Program.

Approved May 21, the program will begin full-scale in fall, 1976. It will become the highest degree program available at Lesley.

"The program is designed to meet the needs of mid-career professionals in education and related fields who wish to increase their competence and gain a broader understanding of the world of education and its social context," according to C.A.G.S. Program Coordinator George E. Hein.

Required courses in social and political issues make this program unique among those at other institutions of higher learning. These courses are designed to enhance professionals' understanding of the world in which their teaching is done.

Designed for persons with a master's degree, experience in education and the desire for mid-career renewal of their specialization, the program is open to both full-time and part-time students.

The Program stresses both theory and practice with opportunities for research and field work.

For more information about Lesley's new C.A.G.S. Program, call George Hein at (617) 868-9600, ext. 215 or write C.A.G.S. Program, Lesley College, 29 Everett Street, Cambridge, Mass. 02138.

Special Ed. Seminars

Graduate School Special Education faculty and students came together during spring semester for a series of Friday afternoon seminars. Topics shared included "adapting instruction to individual differences" and "career women and their babies." Guest speakers were brought in for some of the seminars.
The first annual Lesley Women's Festival on May 12 drew large crowds for the panel discussion on "Lesley: Women's College or Girls' School?", and outdoor barbecue, folksinging and a film festival. Students, faculty and staff members and administrators participated in the day's events, which were sponsored by the Spokeswoman Series.
Faculty Notes

Doing

Diane Levin of the Graduate School faculty is working as a consultant for the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development in Paris this summer. She is preparing a report on the role of the innovative teacher in an innovative American school.

Summer activities for Associate Professor of History Paul Fideler include acceptance of a fellowship to a summer institute on the "new history" at the Graduate School of The City University of New York. Focus of the institute is on the methods and capabilities of quantitative history and on the applicability of psycho-history techniques to childhood history research.

Margery Staman Miller, Assistant Professor of Education, has been awarded her doctorate from the University of Pennsylvania.

Serving as representative from the Massachusetts Association of Teacher Educators to the Executive Council of the New England A.T.E. is Jennifer Page, Division Head for Education. Jennifer was elected at the N.E.A.T.E. annual meeting May 6-8 in Kennebunkport, Maine, where the topic for discussion was "Alternative Careers in Teacher Education."

Norma Canner of the Institute for Arts and Human Development faculty led a workshop on transformations in movement using movement, sound and masks for the New England Dance Therapy Conference April 24-25. Held in Keene, N.H., the conference was sponsored by the Antioch College Dance Therapy Department.

Nancy Roberts, Graduate School faculty member, was one of 15 people from college faculties across the country chosen to participate in a June workshop funded by the National Science Foundation. Located in Colorado, the workshop attempted to develop a curriculum guide for an undergraduate course on the use of computer simulation models of large scale social systems.

Biology Instructor Neil Todd was the subject of a recent full-length article in the Washington Star. He was interviewed about his research on the domestic cat. On May 14 he appeared as a guest on the Canadian Broadcasting Company's morning TV interview show, talking about his research on the domestic cats of Canada.

Speaking

Graduate School Assistant Dean Lenore D. Parker participated in the International Reading Association's 21st annual convention in Anaheim, California, May 10-14. She spoke about "Reading the Illustrations in Children's Books" during a session on early reading skills.

Presenting a paper at the annual meeting of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics in Atlanta, Georgia, was Associate Professor of Mathematics Mark Spikell. His topic was "Integrating Aspects of Mathematics in Science." Mark will return to the Lesley campus in fall, 1976, after a one-year sabbatical leave at Boston University.

Stanley Klein of the Graduate School faculty participated in a panel on the "Role of the Media in Advocacy" at a late March meeting on the rights of people with disabilities. The meeting was sponsored by The Center on Human Policy, Division of Special Education and Rehabilitation, at Syracuse University in New York.

Director of the Institute for the Arts and Human Development Shaun McNiff was the keynote speaker for the sixth Early Childhood Symposium in Peabody, Mass., on March 24. He has also developed an unique program for the development of visual perception for special education learning disabled students. "Looking at Art" seeks to engage students in the analysis of the great works of art through film strips, an extensive teachers' guide, teachers' worksheets and suggested activities.

Graduate School Assistant Dean for Special Education Jill Hamilton was the keynote speaker at a May 19 New Hampshire conference for children with special learning problems. Sponsored by the Capital Area Special Education Services Consortium, the conference was held at the Winnisquam Regional Middle School in Tilton, N.H.

Writing

Arts Institute faculty member Elizabeth McKim has written an essay on teaching poetry writing that is included in a new publication Poemmaking: Poets in Classrooms, a publication of the Massachusetts Council of Teachers of English. Poet McKim's piece is entitled "What Does a Poet-in-Residence Do?" in which she describes her year as such in Brockton, Massachusetts.

Graduate School faculty members Rebecca Corwin, George E. Hein and Diane Levin authored an article in the March, 1976, issue of Childhood Education. Their topic was "Weaving Curriculum Webs: The Structure of Non-linear Curriculum."
Liberalizing the Liberal Arts

by Paul Fideler

Introduction

We want our graduates to be competent not only in their professional skills but also in the art of general inquiry into self and world. We hope that their college studies will help them to become more humane and discerning human beings.

One reason Lesley College prepares competent teachers and child-oriented specialists is the emphasis placed on general life preparation in the College's curriculum.

We realize that professional competence requires not only demonstrable skills but also a range of intangible qualities, attitudes and knowledge that characterize all truly valuable human endeavor. The liberal arts program at Lesley College helps to sharpen students' awareness and capabilities so that professional commitments can grow.

While Lesley's commitment to the liberal arts has been significant and continuous, in recent years it has been necessary to reassess their role, their performance and even their relevance. The leveling-off in enrollments combined with rapidly increasing operating costs produced at Lesley, as at virtually every campus, the need to set priorities to insure institutional survival.

In 1975-76 the minor concentrations in the History and Social Values, Fine Arts and Environmental Studies minor concentrations.

History and Social Values

by Paul Fideler

For the past three years, the historians on the undergraduate faculty at Lesley: Marjorie Wechsler, Michael Fosburg and myself, have been working on changes in the history program that would stress history's capability to help us understand the present.

In 1975-76 the minor concentration "History and Social Values" became part of the undergraduate curriculum. It explores "the human effort, both in the present and in the past, to discover and express the value and meaning of life in society," according to the 1976-77 undergraduate catalog.

More specifically it provides students with the opportunity to examine the development of attitudes, values and institutions that underpin many of our vital concerns today.

In a research seminar, students are introduced to the growing diversity of historical research methods available to historians. They must complete two more courses, Foundation of American Institutions and Culture and Humanities Survey, for a core of three required courses.

Each student designs the bulk of her program by selecting three additional courses in history and one from such disciplines as biology, drama, English, sociology, education, music and philosophy.

The history offerings include courses on the ethnic experience in America, family and childhood, poverty and poor relief policy, social change, American foreign policy and dissent and reform movements. Possible courses in women's history and the history of education are being considered.
Students may opt to substitute internships and field placements for the traditional research term paper in some courses; such experiences may also have later employment potential.

It is our hope that the History and Social Values minor concentration will provide an innovative, credible and useful response to the challenges facing Lesley College and its graduates.

Fine Arts

_by Edmund Ostrander_

"I want to take a pottery course, but I'd better enroll in 'Children with Learning Disabilities' if I want to be impressive in my job interviews," is a common line echoed by college undergraduates today.

But efforts by the fine arts faculty at Lesley College have made this statement increasingly obsolete, for a new minor in fine arts combines the "best of both worlds." Students at Lesley now can more easily enroll in fine arts courses while completing degree requirements.

Concerns over the immediate job market and strong suggestions in the academic catalog about enhancing "chances for professional employment" have resulted, I believe, in a rather one-sided enrollment pattern at the College.

For their elective course work, the vast preponderance of students at Lesley choose courses relating to education, especially special education. Nonetheless, selection of free electives, i.e. those courses not relating directly to minor concentrations, has indicated strong interest in areas such as music, art and drama.

To solve this inconsistency and also to give students the opportunity for a more "liberal" education, the Fine Arts Concentration was conceived and introduced in the 1975-76 catalog. Faculty members in art, drama and music supported and helped to design this concentration.

The concentration's major purpose is to provide additional and more diversified experience in art, drama or music with an emphasis on performance. There is a basic core requirement in the history and aesthetics of these three disciplines; after completion of this, the student is free to concentrate on one of the three areas.

The design fosters an amalgam of the theoretical and practical; we believe an artist learns by doing his/her craft.

The drama concentration requires training in dance as well as acting and directing. Students choosing music must display vocal or instrumental proficiency. Art requirements include achievement in either painting, pottery or photography.

This creative training will undoubtedly prove valuable in a number of fields including teaching. Courses in children's theater are being considered and should be offered in the near future within the concentration.

It is difficult to anticipate job needs five years down the road, but it seems logical to assume that future jobs will need adaptive people with creative artistic training.

Environmental Studies

Acquiring knowledge and experience in field biology, the structure and function of ecosystems, air and water pollution and the problems of rapid population vs. dwindling energy and food resources is the goal of students enrolled in the Environmental Studies minor at Lesley.

Such knowledge provides a grounding in ecological science, with particular emphasis on how it relates to the survival of mankind. It should also provide impressive credentials for future employment as a natural science teacher and/or resource person, according to Assistant Professor of Science Bennett Blumenberg, Environmental Studies leader.

Graduates with this minor may seek placement as field or lab technicians with educational departments of zoos and museums, private ecology organizations, governmental agencies concerned with the environment (E.P.A., Interior Dept., etc.) and university-sponsored research projects.

Currently 12 students are minoring in Environmental Studies. One particularly interesting project was completed by Kathleen Ford '77 during her 1975 January Program. At the Marine Biology Laboratory of Fairleigh Dickinson University in the Virgin Islands, she was part of a team that completed a complex field project on the structure of coral reef algal communities. She competed successfully with biology majors from all over the country.

Other student projects have involved a study of proposed federal ecology legislation, a survey of environmental attitudes in northern Boston suburbs, observation of science teaching in public schools and an experimental simulation of the effects of drought upon the important world food crops.

One required course (Biology 390 - The World System) involves students in completing a project on the state and/or federal legislative process as it affects ecological law-making. This course is one of a series of electives from which History and Social Values minors must choose.

This interface between two minor concentrations, one in the sciences and one in the social sciences, is extremely important and serves to emphasize the manner in which ecological problems now affect social and political systems as well as individual lives.
Alumni Currents

Wanted: Alumni Talent

Ed Ostrander, Associate Professor of Music; Al Brower, Associate Professor of Speech and Drama; and Kitty Dukakis '63, Lecturer in Physical Education, invite alumni who were members of the Collegium Musicum, Drama Club and/or Modern Dance Group to again participate in these groups. For further information about their upcoming programs, contact Ed, Al or Kitty at the College.

Alumni are also invited to submit art work or photography for the cover of The Current. Inquiries and submissions of material should be addressed to Editor, The Current, Lesley College, 29 Everett Street, Cambridge, Mass. 02138.

Growth Options Explored

By popular demand, the Alumni Association sponsored a second seminar on “Exploring Alternatives for Personal and Professional Growth” on April 1 in Alumni Hall. Representatives from Wheelock College and Wider Opportunities for Women joined 14 Lesley alumni for the day.

Participants enjoyed learning about continuing education opportunities available in the Boston area from Peter von Mertens, Assistant Dean for Continuing Education, and job hunting and resume writing from Donna McGrath, Director of Placement at Lesley, and Assistant Director Joanne Scheuble. Director of the Administrative Careers Program Jeanne Speizer discussed career planning and development opportunities available to Lesley alumni.

Comments about the day included: “It was well-focused, gave lots of information and left room for reflection and self-analysis. A wonderful day,” and “Can’t say enough about the whole day – it was super.”

Volunteer Services Organized

Elaine Bernstein Berman ’68 is now Coordinator of Volunteer Services for the Alumni Office in Cambridge. In her new volunteer capacity, Elaine is assisting with the recruitment of class agents, regional representatives and class secretaries. She is also spending several days each week at the Office assisting with a variety of clerical responsibilities.

Elaine has served as a regional representative for the Woburn area, chairperson of the 1976 Ad Book Committee, a member of the Association’s Board of Directors since 1975 and co-chairperson of the Council of Regional Representatives. Many alumni will be familiar with Elaine through her active participation in Association programs and events.

Alumni interested in updating their business and management skills and learning office procedures by working for Lesley’s expanding Alumni Association should contact Elaine. Flexible schedules and complimentary lunches in a stimulating college environment are included. Write: Elaine Bernstein Berman, Coordinator of Volunteer Services, Alumni Office, Lesley College, 29 Everett St., Cambridge, Mass. 02138.

A Votre Service

In cooperation with the Lesley College Graduate School of Education, the Alumni Association offers 10% discounts to alumni enrolled in regular three-credit Graduate School courses. The discount is limited to no more than two regular three-credit courses per semester. Vouchers are available in the Alumni Office or may be completed when registering for a course. Effective September, 1976, vouchers must accompany registration forms.

Cabot House Hosts Alumni

Sixteen Lesley alumni attended the April 27 home decorating workshop at the Cabot House in Burlington, Mass. Interior decorator Richard Cox gave an informative presentation on color and coordinating rooms with rugs, fabrics and wall treatments to achieve a professional look. Opportunities to ask questions and browse through rooms of Drexel Heritage furniture were also available.

Regional Get-togethers

Draw Alumni

Thanks to the excellent organization of Merrimack Valley Regional Representative Nancy Mellen Meehan ’65, 30 alumni living in the Merrimack Valley area enjoyed a dinner meeting at the Vesper Country Club in Tyngsboro, Mass. Following the April 1 dinner, Mrs. Paul G. Anderson of Leiter Designer Fabrics presented a program combining flower arrangements and fabrics.

Jeanne Speizer, Director of the Administrative Careers Program at Lesley’s Graduate School of Education, spoke with Framingham area alumni on May 3. Over coffee and dessert at the home of Ellen Green Bloch ’61, Jeanne discussed opportunities for career development and planning.
Alumni Profile in Courage
Barbara Shinn '51

by Jo Malva '49, '60G

One of the finest experiences in life is to have the good fortune to meet and to be influenced by another person whose cheerful, wise and considerate ways one seems to recall even years later. Barbara Shinn, who attended Lesley College during the years 1950-1951, was such a person.

I am certain that those alumni who knew her during this period, even though it was 25 years ago, feel the same as I do. She had a genuine concern for all her classmates and was truly interested in Lesley College. When I learned of Barbara's death in April, 1976, my thoughts were those of deep gratitude that I had had the privilege of knowing her.

In 1951 Barbara received from Lesley College a BS in education, with honors. She had previously attended Parsonfield Seminary in Maine.

Barbara served for four years as assistant to the late Dr. Walter F. Dearborn, professor of psychology at Lesley. Later she taught at North Shore Country Day School in Beverly, the Cambridge School in Weston, St. Sebastian School in Newton and the Eaglebrook School in Deerfield (all in Massachusetts). Trained in the administering and evaluation of intelligence and achievement tests, she was a professional psychometrist.

Barbara also worked at the language clinic at Massachusetts General Hospital. She was a member of the Association of Remedial Teaching, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the Social Responsibility Committee of the First Parish Unitarian-Universalist Church in Arlington where she helped to sponsor a young Vietnamese child.

For the past 30 years she taught from her home.

In 1958 I visited Barbara in her home and she explained her tutoring program for children with learning disabilities. She had such high hopes for each of her students. The word "drop-out" was not in her vocabulary. All students who entered her door on Florence Avenue in Arlington, Mass., were soon so involved with her inner magic that they found the strength and purpose they had been seeking. All of us in the teaching field have the dream of reaching children in this way, but it takes a special mixture of ingredients to succeed. And Barbara really did succeed.

During most of her life, Barbara suffered from arthritis of the spine. In 1963 it was necessary for her to have an operation which left her unable to sit. She spent the rest of her life either standing or lying down. Barbara had the courage and inner strength she needed to try to live as normal a life as possible; she even managed, with the help of a stretcher, to get out to the local voting booths on Election Day.

During Lesley's building campaign Barbara worked hard, contributing many telephone hours to help raise funds for the College.

Barbara will be missed by many. Her dedication and determination in the field of education leave us a challenge to carry forward.

Hazel Ross '21 enjoyed her 55th reunion.

Professor of Early Childhood Education Mary Mindee received the Alumni Award at Reunion '76. Also honored were Barbara Wickson, Administrative Assistant to the President, and Elmer Benjamin, retiring Associate Professor of Music, who were made honorary members of the Alumni Association.

Receiving an Alumni Recognition Citation is Kitty Dukakis '63. May Hogan '26 also received a citation.

Space limitations prevent us from including all Reunion '76 photos. Watch for more photos, including those of reunion classes 1956, 1966 and 1971 in the fall issue of The Current.

Dorothy Hartings Trefry celebrated her 80th birthday last year. Her husband James passed away in November, 1972.

Jean LaMont is retired from the Browning School in New York City, NY. . . Helen Cutler Laing lives in Brattleboro, VT, with her husband George, a retired assistant high school principal. Helen taught 1st, 2nd and 3rd grade from 1921-28. She has two children and seven grandchildren.

'24

John and Frances Sinnett Snell spent eight months in their home in Venice, FL, and four months in their apartment in Augusta, ME. The Snells have enjoyed several wonderful trips since their retirement; this year they went to Alaska.

'25

Marie E. Bulger (Sister Edwardus Bulger) is a director of early childhood education at Aquinas Jr. College in Newton. She started the program five years ago. Prior to that, she was Ives Superior principal and opened five schools and three new kindergartens. She was also a remedial reading teacher and ran several kindergarten workshops. "I have enjoyed my teaching career," she says. "I was out of Lesley for 50 years last year and will be in religious work for 50 years in 1978."

'26

Kathleen MacBeth Dowd is a widow with three children: Kathleen Murphy of Chelmsford, a title examiner for the Middlesex Co.; and Mary Agnes Meglaski of Nashua, NH, assistant manager of Indian Head Bank . . . Madeline Wallace Ward and her husband Hamilton are retired in Florida. They enjoy visiting their four sons and 13 grandchildren . . . Madeleine Mary Lannin teaches at the McCullock School in North Weymouth, MA. . . Rosamond Hawkins Harrison teaches at the Six Acres Nursery School in Medfield, MA.

Dorothy Hasley Boyle is "still real-estate-ing" in Washington, DC, and nearby Maryland. She has been a widow since 1969 and "can't seem to find a worthy replacement." Dorothy keeps wondering where all the years went.

Helen Mather Benjamin has moved back to Brimfield, MA, after 20 years in the Boston area. She spent three months in Florida, but now back to small-town living . . . Amelina Jennings is retired after teaching 42 years in New Bedford, MA. . . Katherine Fernald Bruce writes from Milton, MA, that her daughter Violet Converse Bruce married a marine lawyer in London in 1975 and now lives in a Richmond, Surrey, home overlooking the old Royal Deer Park. Violet is a buyer at Goode's in London, and her husband travels around the world on business. Katherine's two sons, Barton Fernald and Martin Burbridge, became fathers in July, 1975, and Katherine now enjoys all five of her grandchildren . . . Dear Friends:

Lesley again received the wholehearted support of its alumni, trustees and corporators, parents, and significant financial assistance from foundations, corporations and governmental sources. Faculty and students also gave financial endorsement of the work being done at Lesley. Another all-time high was reached, $245,907, which includes a significant governmental grant for Lesley's work with the Hennigan School pursuant to Judge Garrity's court order.

Many alumni classes gave marvelous contributions, both in terms of donor participation and dollar support. For the third consecutive year, Lesley College was cited as a finalist for the U.S. Steel Award, national recognition of alumni annual giving program improvement. For maintaining Lesley in the top 5 percent of performance by our nation's women's colleges, we give special thanks to Ann Cleveland Lange '59, Chairperson of the Alumni Annual Fund, assisted by Class Agent Chairperson Lorraine Blondes Shapiro '42, Graduate School Chairperson Betty Klaiman '65G and Dialathon Chairperson May E. Hogan '26.

Additionally, we express our gratitude to Lesley's Parents Committee of Connie S. Maniatty P'76, Nelson S. Burbank P'77, George S. Chase P'78, John D. Williams P'79 and Ralph L. Rose P'81, and to the leadership donations from Lesley's Governing Boards.

Above all, we give thanks to you, individually, for your interest in Lesley and hope that your participation next year will be bigger and better!

Sincerely,
Elsa G. Sonnabend, Chairperson Financial Development Committee
