ANNOUNCEMENT RECEIVED BY DR. WHITE

Dramatic Club Busy With Rehearsals

Rehearsals are well under way for the Dramatic Club production Hedda Gabler, which will be presented at the Peabody Playhouse, 327 Charles Street, Boston, on January 18. Curtain time will be at eight o’clock. Hedda Gabler is a social criticism, concerning itself with a woman, Hedda, of few redeeming virtues. “She is spiritually as empty as she is mean to her environment to be.”

John Peters is directing the production besides taking the part of Judge Brack. The cast also includes: Kandi Jakoboen, who is portraying Hedda Gabler; Jim Martin, Hedda’s husband, George Teeman; Gloria Gallant, Miss Juliana Teeman, George’s aunt; Lynn Elkins, Mrs. Elvetol; David Dutton, Rolf Lomborg; and Beverley Ronan, Bertha, servant of the Teeman’s.

The committees have been established and are being led by Anne Penni as stage manager and the various committees are as follows:

Committee on Programs
Leif, R. Weinstein, Sponsor
Penny, Paula Sims

Admission fees are $1.20 per person, and those who can not attend the evening of the production are invited to attend dress rehearsal, Thursday, January 17 at seven forty-five for the admission fee of twenty cents.

Tickets will be on sale on the first floor of the main building Thursday and Friday, January 17 and 18 between twelve thirty and one thirty, and also may be purchased at the playhouse on the evening of the production.

“We hope to have the support of the entire college in attendance for the production,” said Paula Sims, President of the Dramatic Club. “We can certainly promise you an enjoyable evening.”

Recently, Mrs. Learoyd of the New England Camping Association came to speak to Miss Staines’ sociology class on the subject of counseling.

Who would they be? Would they sell? We need you to come back. I have been looking for the book, but it isn't. My three latest tormentors out of the corner of my eye.

The bobbed head shot down, abashed.

Dick the book, I am sure that each of us at Lesley have. Not too long ago, almost three semesters ago (so you must realize that I am only a Sophomore), I entered Lesley College. My first impressions were of gaiety, closeness, fairness, and UNITY. Some of these is being under staffed.

Most girls have the wrong idea about working on a newspaper, still experiencing many growing pains.

The LANTERN is a fairly new addition to Lesley College, and therefore it is still experiencing many growing pains. One of our main problems is being under staffed.

Although most people a newspaper implies only literary staff, there is more and more that goes into an edition than people realize. We have several departments in the LANTERN all working together, but doing separate jobs. Some girls are out securing ads, while others are working on rewrite and layout. All of these departments need people that are interested in working on a newspaper, because if everyone had dropped out and were back, there would be no LANTERN.

Lesley Graduate School DISCUSSES THE GIFTED CHILD

The Graduate School of Lesley College held its second meeting on Tuesday, January 15. After a buffet supper in the Wolford Room, the group adjourned to Room C where a panel discussion of Lesley College faculty members proved a very challenging experience. Under the chairmanship of Dr. Philip B. Canova, Director of the Lesley-Smith Library, the following people participated in a discussion on the Education of the Gifted Child:

Mr. Edmund B. Larm, Dr. Winifred Lair, Mr. Allan Morris and Miss Dorothy E. Sharpe.

The Graduate School of Lesley College is one of the newest organizations at Lesley. Its purposes are to advance professional feeling and understanding, to encourage graduate study, and to stimulate research for the solving of problems in contemporary education.

I pushed myself out of my chair, weakly.

"Let's have a look," I coughed, waiting for three latest tormentors out of the corner of my eye. "Did you try over here in the fiction section — under the 'M'?

"Three headed bobbed up and down affirmatively.

But what happened? The attendance at class meetings soon dropped. In fact, it dropped so low that attendance was made compulsory. Is that or should that be the case? It is such a small and close COLLEGE as ours? Various clubs and organisations throughout the school began sponsoring various class and all-college events. Some of these important money-makers and the class was lucky if they "broke even." Per week, as the saying goes, there went more into the class coffers than would go into my consciousness. Where was the Moby Dick fun? There was more to the routine in my days. I shot a quick glance around the room. No customer had disappeared. Odd.

I pulled the cards into their filing tray and pulled out my watch, The Library in College Instructs.

About halfway through chapter five, a raspy whisper of voices broke through my reverie. "German for the book, but it isn't there!"

"Yes, yes! We saw the last night at the University Theater — "Gregory Peck was simply terrific!"

"Don't interrupt, Bobbie... We looked for the book, but it isn't there!"

"It was a good story, but I couldn't fight it. I pushed myself out of my chair, weakly.

"For the book, but it isn't there!"

Three headed bobbed up and down affirmatively.

"But it isn't there," they persisted.

And, as it turned out, it wasn't. Suddenly I caught a quick flash of disappointment on my upturned face.

"Well, I'm sorry, girls, but I guess someone has taken it out," I offered apologetically. Perhaps it wasn't a game after all.

This might have been the end of the Moby Dick story, but as luck would have it, it wasn't. Quite. Not two hours later, Dr. X. tore into the library, happily waving a sheaf of papers in my direction.

"Those are my reading lists for the semester. Thought you might like to have some copies down here."

"Well, thank you..." I started to say. Then I saw it. Halfway down the middle of the first page.

THE LANTERN SPEAKS

As students of Lesley College, each one of you is entitled to a yearly subscription to the LANTERN, your school newspaper. But how many of you pick it up, glance over the headlines, turn to the paintings and engagements, and then throw it away? If you can find yourself guilty of this, then you are not taking full advantage of your LANTERN.

The LANTERN is a fairly new addition to Lesley College, and therefore it is still experiencing many growing pains. One of our main problems is being under staffed.

WHAT IS WRONG?

Here it is 1957, the beginning of a new year, and to meet of us than means "resolutions."

I am sure that each of us at Lesley has made a secret or widely proclaimed individual resolution. However, I do feel that as a school, everyone of us should make one resolution in unison.

Not too long ago, almost three semesters ago (so you must realize that I am only a Sophomore), I entered Lesley College. My first impressions were of gaiety, closeness, fairness, and UNITY. Soon our period of Orientation was over and I was left with only vivid memories of our good times. The girls and faculty were just wonderful. Before we all realized it, it was time for us to elect our class officers. Who would they be? Would they sell? We need you to come back. I have been looking for the book, but it isn't. My three latest tormentors out of the corner of my eye.

Some people get too tired to give you "a smile. Give them one of yours, for some need a smile so much as he who has not any more to give."

Annual Unity

Looking over the group of youngsters and their parents you would have thought that there was another happy group gathered in the common room of a college. You have seen how united the whole group was. White is head of the organization.

The party was at the Elgin meeting house on Mt. Auburn St. here in Cambridge on December 15 in the afternoon and Lesley's Compass Club was asked to help put on the supervision of the games and songs. Three of us spent the afternoon having a perfectly wonderful and satisfying time with the children whose ages ranged from one to twelve years old, and felt that it was most certainly a beneficial experience.

The Lantern regrets that in the last issue, a printer's error confused the last two columns of Miss Sharples' Christmas article, making hard reading for our public and robbing Miss Sharples of the joys of authorship. We are truly sorry.
