Bob Reinke ECONOMIC EDUCATION

by The Roving Reporter
Theresa Kelleher

Bob Reinke is the Director for The National Center of Economic Education for Children here at Lesley College. Bob received his Bachelor's degree in Economics and Social Studies Education, his Master's degree in Economic Education, and his Ph.D. in Economics and Education all from the University of Minnesota.

The general purpose of the center is "to involve teachers and students at the elementary level [pre-school-8] in the benefits that can be derived from economic education." Some of these benefits include, a better understanding of the "real world", improved self-concept, and the ability to make choices. The basic philosophy of the center is that one can learn economics thoroughly but painlessly; in other words, economics can be fun and enjoyable.

Presently, there seems to be a need for teachers with a strong economic background since twenty-eight states now mandate economics education in grades K-12. Many teachers don't have a good economic background, therefore creating the need for Education students to have good understanding of basic economic principles. The center is trying to improve this situation by putting out several publications such as The Elementary Economist (quarterly) and Children in the Market Place: Economic Lesson Plans for Grades 3 and 4. The center is also putting together a community-based curriculum. This unit of instruction will tie in parents, the media, community resources, and teachers and students. The reasoning behind this curriculum plan is that all the real life factors should be involved in the instruction of economics. The center will also be holding some in service programs for graduate students this summer to help them strengthen their economics background.

The center is currently involved with approximately sixteen different states across the country including; Florida, Colorado, California, Virginia, Minnesota, and Massachusetts. The center is working with approximately forty to fifty different school systems throughout the country. The center also has an extensive mailing list for The Elementary Economist which consists of approximately 35,000 people from various states.

The center is located on 35

Mellen St. on the first floor so if you would like more information, stop by and visit Bob and the rest of his staff. There is a wide variety of materials available at the center so stop in and see about putting your name on the mailing list.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR: A Plea For Change

I am very concerned about the bleak situation that is facing us at Lesley College. The situation that I am talking about concerns the quality of education Lesley students receive, the quality of life we endure, the lack of respect towards students by some faculty and administration, the increasing control of SGA over student's activities, the strict confines of Lesley College which influences students to go no further than the campus for intellectual awareness, (resulting in a lack of knowledge by students of current events outside the Lesley College campus), the lack of participation of students on important issues, and the missing advantages of a small school. I am not here to complain, but to offer my observation of the problems at Lesley to the faculty, administration, and fellow peers. I am relaying the message that I have been told over and over again by other students. Hopefully, this will provide an opportunity for faculty, administration and students to meet and arrange guidelines for a much needed change of the structure that prevails at Lesley College at the moment.

We pay for college courses and are confronted with some high-school level faculty. Now, I am not talking about all faculty members, for we certainly have some of the best teachers at Lesley, but each student, and all the students as a whole, have a right to evaluate and be an integral part and influence in the choosing of Lesley College faculty. The Davis forms that we have been filling out for years have never been summarized as a report and offered to the students. We have never seen the results of those evaluations, not knowing whether our opinions are even considered! Who better than the students to judge who they want as teachers. Students' opinions should be taken as valid.

I am not going to print the faculty members' names here in this article because of the respect I have for them as people, but I am willing to divulge their names to anyone who is as interested and concerned as I am about changing the quality of education here at Lesley. I would also like to state that I am not the only one who thinks that these professors are incapable to teach at the college level. Other students feel the same aggravation and disappointment that I experience. The disappointment that comes along not only with the educational quality but with the lack of respect students receive from some faculty and administration. There is a very draining and frustrating feeling when a student starts to organize her schedule and finds that a required course has not or is not being offered in the next year. You also find yourself struggling with the reality that the same teacher is teaching the same course year after year. This struggle can create an anger that prevents students from continuing at Lesley or fulfilling their high expectations. We come to college striving to be independent adults but we are not often treated as such. We need the support and confidence from faculty and administration in order to grow and mature into self-respecting women.

In order for this growth to take place, we also need a social atmosphere and a healthy climate to establish a flourishing environment. The gym at Lesley is not efficient enough for any kind of sport with the exception of jump roping. If there were men at this school, would the gym continue to remain small and enclosed? We have a tennis court which is maybe usable for two to three months out of the school year. We can also use the pool at Ringe and Latin High School. We can use the squash courts at Harvard as long as we know somebody who can get us in. There are plenty of aerobics and exercise classes we can join, if we have the money. Our bodies are deteriorating while our brains are being dulled by the strict confines of the reality that exists at Lesley College. No, we need a facility on the Lesley Campus where students can exercise, play sports, or dance to the fullest extent. Right now the gym we do have is taken up by graduate students for their courses. We can't even use the facilities that are available to us!

Not only is there no facility where students can use their energy or maintain their health, but there is not even a student union or pub where students can gather together socially. Commuters and transfers feel out of place and estranged when they come to Lesley. There is no familiar or common ground where Lesley students can share their opinions and personalities. The places that we do have are drab and ugly. The paint on the outside of the houses is chipping off and the floor tiles that consistently peel off are unrepaired. The walls of White Hall look like the inside of an institution. Juniors have been forced to live there for three years in a row because of room drawing. Student teachers and older students are frustrated and agonized by the noise and disruption that continually goes on in White Hall. However, they can do nothing about it except hope for a low number. I can understand why the thought about putting freshman, sophomores, juniors, and seniors came about, but the fact is that there is a big difference between twenty-one and seventeen year olds. Perhaps consideration for the older students who no longer have a flexible schedule has to take place.

Now, when students do get together to plan an event, they have to go through SGA to be approved. I can understand that events should go through SGA so organization and direction will be efficient, but the SGA should not control the specific happenings. SGA is not allowing two clubs to fund raise for the same week or holiday, sort of putting a control on competition. Well, I always thought America stood for democracy and the government is supposed to be for the people. Therefore, the Student Govern-

FROM THE DEE LINE...

By Norman Dee

Hello Swimming Fans!!

Well, Super Bowl XVII is over and it's hail to the chiefs, the Kings of the football world, the Washington Red Skins. It was a great game to watch. However, I was a little confused by the half time show. I thought I had died and went to heaven. For most National Football League teams the words will be "wait til next year", for the New England Patriots it will be "I want to be traded". I will close the football season by congratulating Boston College for a great season, Boston University for tying the Yankee Conference, and Harvard for defeating Yale and I forgot whether they won or tied for the Ivy League Championship. If they did, congratulations!! For you swimming fans cut a hole in the ice, jump or dive in and see how thick the ice is. As for basketball, the Boston Celtics continue on a high note winning most of their games. But, how about those Boston Bruins. They haven't caused so much enthusiasm since Bobby Orr. Pete Peeters is playing outstanding hockey in goal. There is so much action around the nets it looks like a Lesley fire drill. In local basketball, Boston College is doing well in the Big East, Boston University likewise in the Big North Atlantic conference. Harvard is doing well in the Ivy League, Northeastern, after giving us lots of excitement last year is rebuilding. I predict that the Celtics will continue to win and go on to the NBA championship series. I predict the Bruins will win the coveted Stanley Cup. Boston College and Boston University will make the first rounds of the NCAA championships, and the Dobag Society will continue to be a valuable part of the social and academic life at Lesley College. My Blue Plate special prediction is that the Groundhog will come out of his hole, look around, fall into a pot hole and disappear. In college hockey it's Beanpot Time. Harvard vs. Boston College, Northeastern vs. defending Champion Boston University in Round I. I predict that Harvard will play Boston University for all the beans on Monday, February 14, 1983. Don't forget Valentines Day is the 14th. Send all Valentines to Dobag President, Dobag Society, Dobag Office of Admissions, Lesley College, Thank You. The new football league, can you imagine, is beginning practice sessions for their openers in March. Spring training for the baseball season begins in a few weeks, can Spring be far ahead? I predict the new football league will challenge the National Football League in the Super Bowl MXCLVIII to be played in Boston. I also predict you swimming fans, dive into the pool and count slowly until you reach bottom. Count backwards until you reach the surface. Divide the total by 2 and you will have the answer, (the question will appear in next issue). Well, that's all for now sports fans. This is old Norm jumping off the diving board and remembering they forgot to fill the pool. I also leave you with this thought, "the few, the proud, the Dobag Society".

Dear Aunt Millie

Dear Fellow Lesley Ladies,

Because there is a lack of problems on the Lesley campus, Aunt Millie has decided to invite a guest journalist for this issue. This feature journalist will share some of her insights into the increasingly complex state of romance! Stay tuned: you are about to be enlightened.

By Cousin Gertie

Although one may think that romance is an extremely complex issue, I, Cousin Gertie feel that it can be explained quite simply. Read on and you shall find out about my personal romantic experiences, which I'm sure relate to all of you. For the sake of simplification, I will use letters instead of names. This will also protect the guilty.

It is quite simply explained in these terms. There are three participants in this romance, A, B, and C. A being myself, B being the man of my attraction, and C being the other woman. A meets B and is completely infatuated-in all aspects. However, the feeling is not mutual. Is it ever girls, hmm girls, hmm!!! Meanwhile B meets C and falls madly in love. Of course, in this situation, the feeling between these two lovebirds is mutual. Just as A is coming to terms with the relationship between B and C, B and C have a spat. Oh dear! To further complicate matters, B consults A as to the best method for reconciliation with C. Following along girls, hmm! Now then, this of course throws A into complete turmoil. Should she advise B on how to get back with C or should she express her true feelings to B, throwing his life into complete turmoil?

To find out what Cousin Gertie does or to suggest a solution for Cousin Gertie, send a self-addressed envelope to:

Student Union

Yes, you read that correctly. SGA is writing a proposal to Don Orton and the Board of Trustees for a student union on the Lesley campus. We feel that this is a badly needed facility to give commuters, residents, and faculty a place to get together to relax, study, chat, or whatever. We are looking for hard-working people who can devote a fair amount of time to research and report all aspects of what a union entails. This committee would meet every other week. Commuters and faculty are greatly encouraged to submit their names for this committee. Drop a note in the SGA mailbox in the faculty/administration mail area or contact Joanned Poncelet, SGA President, 491-7510.

ment Association is supposed to be for the students. Well, most of the time they are. However, clubs have been allotted a certain amount of money each year. When that money runs low or out, students need to raise more. We finally get students involved in the school and they are turned down. How can a club keep on providing events, services, and opportunities for students when they aren't even allowed to raise money (unless of course, they are first in line to SGA)? I am not against SGA, I am for SGA. I am for understanding SGA. This is the ultimate advantage of a small school. Everybody knows each other and this allows us the opportunity to be flexible with each other. I don't find flexibility with all SGA members. SGA is for the students; therefore, I would assume that they would encourage events and fundraisers. If someone happens to make a mistake or doesn't follow the rules to the tee, are we to assume that following the rules is more important than human involvement and motivation? Come on, let's work together!

Lastly, I feel that students are not encouraged enough to be up on current issues or happenings outside of the Lesley campus (besides the best bars and discos in Boston). I understand that there are strict requirements towards certification but I also understand that some students will not be aware of more important issues that influence the state of our country. As future teachers, awareness is something that should be required. How many students here realize the possible effects of a nuclear war? How many do something about it? How many students have

Women's Center

The Women's Center is sponsoring a self-defense workshop for the Lesley College Community. The following Tuesdays are: March 1, March 15, March 29, April 12, April 26, and May 10. Faculty, commuters, transfer students and graduate students are especially invited to come.

We would like to remind everybody about our regular meetings on Sunday nights from 9-10 P.M. in the Women's Center. All students are encouraged to participate in this wonderful opportunity of planning, organizing and sharing exciting events.

acted either pro or con for the pro-choice bill? How many realize the importance of this issue to every woman in Massachusetts?

As a Lesley College student, as a woman, and as an individual, I have been lucky. I have been motivated by particular faculty members, I have been influenced by inner initiative, and I have been introduced to fellow students who feel similarly which has helped me grow and enhance my awareness during my stay at Lesley College. However, this is the case for very few. The attitude of students at Lesley is a struggling one. Students have legitimate complaints that need to be heard and changed. They have rights as individual paying students at Lesley College. Let's maintain those rights to better the situation at Lesley and to continually better our lives and the lives of others. If we take a stand now, who knows what we can accomplish later.

Minority Student Union

I Have A Dream

Dr. Martin Luther King was a great man.

He tried to help all the poor black people. And he was going around trying to help black people and white people to stop fighting so much. And when I heard that he got shot and died I felt like crying.

And I had a dream that he was in my room laying on the bed and it was dark in the room. And I'll never forget it as long as I live. And I think the man that shot him should be put in jail.

And I bet he wanted to stop the War in Vietnam after he was finished with his other work to. I saw his funeral on Saturday. And I don't see why Black people and White people can't be friends. We are all made the same way inside so why can't we be friends? But I see that Black and White people were at his funeral. But I'll never ever forget it.

the End

As many of you know, February is Black History Month. The Minority Student Union would like to share this celebration with everyone through several events we have planned. We invite everyone to stop by our bulletin board to see our special display of pictures, teaching resources and ideas related to Black History. Our bulletin board is located along the cafeteria line. We will also begin selling stuffed animals and pocket calendars as a fund raiser.

Below is a poem taken from; The Me Nobody Knows; Children's Voices From The Ghetto. Edited by Stephen M. Joseph, 1969. This poem was written by a seven year old boy named Randy E. The M.S.U. feels that this poem represents a special tribute to the late Martin Luther King, Jr., and would like to share it with everyone.

Interview with Lesley Taylor and Margret McPhail, English Exchange students.

1. Where are you doing your internships?

Lesley Taylor: I am doing mine with the Department of Social Services working with child social workers in the area of child abuse.

Margaret McPhail: I work at the 9 to 5. They work for the rights of female office workers.

2. Do you believe that there are major philosophical differences between the English system and the American system in regards to human services?

Lesley: Yes. The English system has a built-in welfare system which theoretically provides for all aspects of human welfare. The American system is based on self-achievement and individualism. It only provides the material necessities for people. It is used as a back-up system for people who cannot cope. The welfare system in England is also in danger of becoming like the American system which means the erosion of the welfare state. The American way of life is bound up with the profit motive.

3. What are some of the strengths and weaknesses of the human services in the United States?

Lesley: The weakness is the bureaucracy. The bureaucracy does not allow the people working on the grass root level to do the jobs they want to do. On the other hand, the bureaucracy strives to achieve the rights of individuals. The hierarchy in the bureaucracy do not know the people who they give orders to or the situations they work under. The people in the hierarchy are just political appointments.

4. What exactly is the anti-pornography group that you are a member of?

Margaret: WAVAW. Women Against Violence Against Women.

5. Why should pornography be banned?

Margaret: Pornography degrades women. It makes them into objects for men's sexual titillation. It encourages men to see women as objects for abusing and breeds violence against women.

6. If the government is given the license to ban pornography, is there not the danger that it would also ban other forms of literature?

Margaret: I don't think it should be across the board. One decision should not apply to all decisions. Each case should be handled individually. It's the product of patriarchal materialistic society.

7. What would be the benefits of banning pornography?

Margaret: Creation of a more equal society for women.

8. Would you say there is the same amount of sex discrimination against women? in England and the United States?

Lesley: Yes. In England and America, women do get passed over in job promotions.

9. Is there a change in the government's attitudes towards the role of women?

Lesley: In England, there is a trend in forcing women to go back to the homes. There are cuts in the government spending which reduces the number of child care facilities. Recently there was a rearrangement in the unemployment statistics.
